James Charles Addresses Renewed Attention to 2024 Leaked Video Amid Ongoing Online Discussions

January 23, 2026 – Beauty influencer James Charles Leak continues to draw attention online due to discussions surrounding an explicit video that originally surfaced in August 2024. The clip, described in reports as a roughly five-minute NSFW recording from a video call on the Monkey app, showed intimate content and spread quickly across social media platforms including X (formerly Twitter), TikTok, and Telegram before being largely removed by moderators.

The video led to widespread reactions at the time, with users sharing memes, debates, and comparisons to other high-profile celebrity privacy incidents, such as Kim Kardashian's 2007 leaked tape. Charles, now 26, appeared to reference the situation indirectly in TikTok comments sections shortly after the leak. In one exchange, he responded to a user suggesting the incident was a publicity move similar to Kardashian's by engaging lightly, though he did not provide a detailed public statement confirming or denying details of the footage's authenticity.

Recent mentions of the video in early 2026 appear to stem from recycled discussions and sporadic shares rather than any new developments or fresh leaks. No credible mainstream sources have reported a new release or escalation in January 2026, and Charles has remained focused on his regular content creation. Recent uploads include fun challenges such as a pregnancy simulator makeup tutorial, annual bloopers and outtakes compilations welcoming the new year, and collaborations tied to his Painted cosmetics brand.

Charles, who first rose to prominence in 2016 with viral makeup content and has since built a following of millions across YouTube, TikTok, and Instagram, has navigated various public controversies over the years. He continues to produce beauty tutorials, trend reactions, and personal vlogs, maintaining active engagement with his audience.

This situation underscores broader concerns in digital spaces regarding privacy, consent, and the rapid spread of non-consensual intimate material. Platforms have continued to enforce removals, but isolated copies can persist in less moderated areas. Charles has not issued further comments on the matter recently, and his current activity centers on creative and entertaining posts rather than addressing past rumors.
